Geriatric Assessment of Older Adults. The geriatric assessment is an integral component of the comprehensive geriatric assessment. This clinical tool in care of older adults has both strengths and weaknesses. This systematic review will focus on the strengths and weaknesses of the geriatric assessment. We highlight the importance of the comprehensive geriatric assessment and discuss it as a cost-effective intervention that decreases hospital length of stay, costs, and has a positive effect on quality of life and decreased disability and mortality. The comprehensive geriatric assessment may be helpful for the prevention of adverse outcomes and unnecessary hospitalization in elderly patients. Nevertheless, it is important to recognize the many variables that influence this clinical assessment and that proper education of the healthcare provider is needed for the optimal use of this tool. Look, we're not gonna bother with the whole "you ran a 1000-word ad equating black people to apes" discussion this week because we're mostly not interested in watching that, and it's true that the discussion is unlikely to go anywhere if you don't like that. Neither is the question of whether any of the elephant in the room(s) should be addressed. So instead, we're going to speculate on what, if anything, about Trump's tweet can be justified that would allow him to continue in office, if, say, every news outlet were to refuse to report on it. Look, the author of that tweet is a congressman. We assume that he sees the value of the press for expressing his opinions
